Hunger by Jayanta Mahapatra is one of the darkest, dreadful, and daring poems I have read in recent times. Originally published in 1976 as the part of the poem collection, A Rain of Rites, Hunger established Mahapatra as one of the superstar poets in the Indian English literature world. The poem explores the themes of the sex trade, poverty, and emotional vacuum.

Hunger By Jayanta Mahapatra [Analysis] : Life Stalker

Mahapatra wrote many poems on the themes of poverty, hunger, starvation, sexual exploitation and bestiality of males. Hunger by Jayanta Mahapatra reveals the plight of a fisherman who can’t make both ends meet. The poignancy of the situation is that ‘hunger’ imposes tragic compulsions – the poor father kills his conscience and entices clients for his daughter, who has become a prostitute.
